GREEN-RAINBOW — A United Party

How We've Grown

1970s International Green Party movement begins.
1983 Rainbow Coalition (RC) movement begins with the Boston mayoral race of Mel King, former five-term state legislator.
1984 Inspired by success of German Green Party, a group of U.S. activists come together to form the Green Committees of Correspondence network.
1986 1st GP candidate appears on U.S. ballot.
1987 Serious Massachusetts Green organizing begins as an activist movement.
1980s Rainbow Coalition founds Multiversity; holds five annual Martin Luther King Jr. banquets and community awards ceremonies.
1989 1st fully delegated U.S. Green Party Congress
1996 Massachusetts Green Party (MGP) emerges as an electoral force with Ralph Nader's first presidential campaign; Rainbow members support campaign.
1997 RC obtains political designation.
1998 MGP commits itself to the clean elections campaign, gathering tens of thousands of signatures for the initiative which eventually becomes law.
1999 Rainbow Coalition Party member Chuck Turner elected to Boston City Council.
2000 Rainbow Coalition Party endorses and joins in fundraising and campaigning for Green Party Nader-LaDuke presidential ticket. Ticket receives more than 6% of Massachusetts votes, thereby giving the MGP official ballot status. MGP membership doubles.
2001 Chuck Turner reelected to Boston City Council.
2002 Green Party fields three statewide candidates - Jill Stein for Governor, Anthony Lorenzen for Lt. Governor, James O'Keefe for Treasurer, and several regional candidates. O'Keefe receives 8% of votes to retain the MGP official ballot status. Again, MGP membership doubles.
2003 MGP changes name to Green-Rainbow Party, and Rainbow Coalition Party members unite with renamed Green-Rainbow Party.
